Film Title: Eve

Director: Paul Leeming

Producer: Joshua Lay

Duration: 15min

Approximate Rating: M (for nudity and adult themes)

Plot Summary:

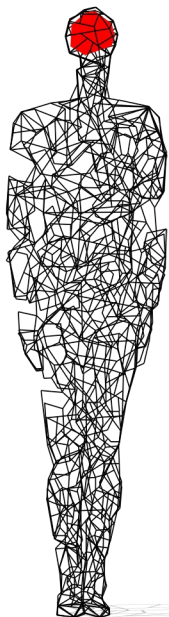

"Eve" opens with the character of Eve undressing for Mark (full frontal nudity). Eve is then seen washing Mark in the bath before he gets up and she dries him off (nudity). Later on Eve kisses Mark goodnight in bed. Opening credits roll. Eve and Mark are walking through the dinosaur museum. Mark walks off and leaves Eve who has a conversation with Charlotte, a little girl, before Charlotte's mother comes along and takes Charlotte away while berating Eve. Mark returns. At Mark's apartment, Eve is cooking dinner. Reaching for a bottle of wine, with Mark looking up her skirt at her panties, she slips and the bottle of wine hits her in the head. She falls to the floor. At the robot repair shop Eve is lying naked and face down on the operating gurney (nudity). The doctor opens her up, revealing she is a robot, and probes her insides before telling Mark she cannot be fixed. Mark takes Eve to Viggo's Sexbot Emporium and he tells him the same thing and suggests he buy a new robot, pointing out the latest model. Mark declines and goes home where he and Eve watch television. An ad for the new robots comes on and after watching it, Eve leaves for the bedroom. Mark follows, apologises and proceeds to undress her down to her underwear before putting on her nightie. Eve lies awake thinking while Mark sleeps. The next night Mark and Eve head out. Crossing the road, Eve stops while Mark continues on. She turns into an oncoming car and stands there until it hits her (adult themes). Mark sees this and rushes to help her but it is too late. Eve dies in Mark's arms as a young robot girl and her human mother look on.
